The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

National Library of Canada

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol → (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▽ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Bibliothèque nationale du Canada

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole → signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▽ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

Preface.

VAIN pride of ancestry is silly, and the snobbishness that estimates a man's worth only according to the social status of his grandfather is contemptible; nevertheless every man should endeavor to know all he can of his family history; the indifference that some profess as to such things is either insincere, or it is a mark of littleness of mind or of selfishness. It is, or should be, a matter of interest to every one to know something of those who have borne his name before him—no matter whether they have been earls or blacksmiths; and more especially so if they (whether earls or blacksmiths) have served their country well and faithfully, either in peace or in war, in great things or in small.

No people can look back to a more honourable commencement from which to date their family histories than those whose ancestors were United Empire Loyalists, or the later immigrants who came to Upper Canada as pioneers to take their part in constructing a prosperous country out of a wilderness—a task which called for courage, energy and patience, as the necessary conditions of success; a people who showed that they possessed these virtues when in 1812 they resolutely rose to defend their infant country against an aggressive power who threatened—and endeavored—to overwhelm them with an army exceeding in number the whole population of the country attacked.

A century has now passed since the United Empire Loyalist settlement of Upper Canada took place, and three-quarters of a century since the conclusion of the War of 1812. In those two events and in the intervening period there were many who had a prominent part in public affairs, and whose names appear in history, who have left descendants. It is very rarely that a man, gentle or simple, can name his great grandfather, except in cases where some care has been taken to preserve family records. Each new generation that arises means one more past generation forgotten. There are already numerous descendants of early settlers in this Province who cannot show their descent, and in another quarter of a century there will be comparatively few who can do so, unless some effort is made to preserve family histories. At the request of a number of persons interested, I have undertaken the task of doing what I may be able to do towards this work.

It has not been my intention to include in this work families only of superior social standing. The list of those who appear in it might seem to indicate some such selection, but that is simply because the history of some families has been less difficult to obtain than that of others. And though the purpose of the work has reference to the earlier settlers, I have not thought it inconsistent to include immigrants of more recent arrival.

Most genealogical works follow the plan of selecting an individual and tracing his ancestry; this work is just the reverse, as it is the naming of an ancestor and tracing, as far as practicable, all his descendants. I have therefore omitted none whose names I could learn, except in the case of children of persons who have left Ontario and gone to live elsewhere. I have even been particular to include those whose career is summed up in the curt but pathetic d. inf. Some of those to whom I am indebted for assistance in obtaining particulars of their families have not quite understood what was desired in this respect.

I am fully conscious that the work is likely to contain imperfections. I can only say that I have taken great pains to secure accuracy, and if any errors should be discovered, I will take it as a great favour if they are brought to my notice so that corrections may be made.

The genealogies have been constructed from data supplied by family records, registered wills and deeds, histories and various other sources of information, and in every case I have sought the assistance of one or more members of the family concerned, which I may say here, has in nearly every case been readily and courteously rendered.

E. M. CHADWICK.

Armorial Bearings.

A LITTLE explanation may be desirable as to the methods adopted in showing armorial bearings in this work. In cases in which the evidence of the correctness of those used is such as to leave no room for doubt, the arms are described in ordinary type. Where such positive evidence is not at hand, inasmuch as it often happens from various causes that families bear arms different from those to which they are entitled, it has been thought better for the descriptions to be printed in italics; it must be quite understood, however, that where this occurs it does not suggest any doubt of the right of the family concerned to bear arms, but simply indicates the absence of positive and authentic information as to the correctness of those actually used. Nor does the omission of arms in any case imply the absence of a right to bear them, but only shows that the author has not succeeded in obtaining the necessary particulars.

MacDonell.

MACDONELL OF GLENGARRY, U. E. L.

SOME time after the breaking up of the Scottish Clans, which followed the defeat of the Stuarts in 1745, a considerable number of the Macdonells of Glengarry emigrated to America under the leadership of Macdonells of Scotus, Leek, Aberchalder and Collachie, Cadets of Glengarry, and settled on the Mohawk River in the central part of the then Province of New York. On the breaking out of the Revolutionary War all the men of the Clan in America took up arms in defence of the Crown, in such numbers as to form, in great part, the 1st Battalion of the King's Royal Regiment of New York, of which Sir John Johnson was Colonel, while others entered the Royal Highland Emigrant Regiment (afterwards known as the 84th), and Butler's Rangers. The Macdonells thus rendered valuable services throughout the war, during which they suffered great cruelties and indignities at the hands of the Revolutionary Party, from which no rank, sex or age was exempt, and also lost all their properties.* On the conclusion of the war they settled in what is now the extreme eastern part of Ontario, and part of which bears their name, the County of Glengarry, then an unbroken wilderness of forest. Here they were subsequently joined by the Macdonells of Greenfield and many of their fellow clansmen and other Highlanders, notably (in 1804) the disbanded soldiers of the Glengarry Fencible Regiment, which served (under Col. Alexander-Ranaldson Macdonell, Chief of Glengarry) in the Irish Rebellion of 1798, who were brought to Canada by the celebrated priest, soldier and statesman, the Rev. Alexander Macdonell, Chaplain (Roman Catholic) to the Regiment.†

*Colonel Matthews, Military Secretary to Sir Guy Carleton, Lord Dorchester, Captain General and Commander-in-chief of the forces in Canada during the Revolutionary War, bore the following testimony to the services of the gentlemen referred to and their adherents in a letter, addressed to the Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, dated Chelsea College, 23rd June, 1804. * * * "When the Rebellion broke out they were the first to fly to arms on the part of Government, in "which they and their adherents took a most active and decided lead, leaving their families and "property at the mercy of the rebels. I was at the time quartered at Niagara, and an eye witness "of the gallant and successful exertions of the Macdonells and their dependents, by which, in a "great measure, the upper country of Canada was preserved."

†(Hon. and Rt. Rev.) Alexander Macdonell, who was also chaplain to the Glengarry Light Infantry Regiment (on the regular establishment of the army), which served with great distinction in the war of 1812, was raised to the Episcopate (R.C.) in 1820, and was Bishop of Regiopolis or Kingston, 1826 to 1840. He was a member of the Legislative Council of Upper Canada, 1831 to 1840, in which year he died, aged 80. The town of Alexandria, in the county of Glengarry, was named in his honour.

*It is believed that the Battle of Chateauguay (as it was fought by the Militia only, no other troops being present), more than any of their other services, won for the Canadians the honourable distinction, borne by all Canadian troops, however raised or commissioned, of carrying the colours and wearing the facings of "Royal" Regiments. The writer has, however, been unable to verify this fact.

MACNAB.

THE Macnabs having suffered severely in the troublous times of the 18th century, a number of them came to Canada in the early part of the present century, and in 1823 Archibald Macnab, 13th Chief of Macnab, came to Canada and settled in the Township of Macnab on the Ottawa River, where he resided nearly forty years, when he returned to Scotland, and died in France 12th Aug. 1860, aged 83. His only surviving child was Sarah-Anne, known as "Miss Macnab of Macnab," who resided at Florence in Italy, and d. 19th Jan. 1894, unm. It appears to be not certainly known who is successor to the chieftainship, but it is probable that James Macnabb, many years Commissioner at Delhi (brother of Sir Donald-Campbell Macnabb, K.C.I.E., C.S.I.), has the best claim.

Among the families of this clan who settled in Ontario are the following:

MACNAB OF DUNDURN (CANADA). U. E. L.

ALLAN MACNAB, b. 1768, d. 6th June 1830, Ensign 71st Regt. and afterwards Lt. 19th Hussars; was on Gen. Simcoe's staff in the American Revolutionary War, after which he came to Canada. He took up arms in 1812 * and after having seen a good deal of service for one so young, was promoted to an ensigncy in the 49th Reg. On the reduction of the Army after the war he entered upon the study of the law, and was called to the bar in 1825. Was the first Queen's Counsel appointed in Canada. Was elected M. L. A. in 1829, and sat for Co. Wentworth, and for Hamilton, in nine successive Parliaments, being Speaker in the last Parliament of Upper Canada. In 1837, on the breaking out of the Rebellion, he, with great energy and promptitude, raised the "Men of Gore," and marched to the relief of Toronto, then seriously threatened; and was in command of the Loyalists, by whom the Rebellion was crushed in the neighbourhood of Toronto and in the West, and then on the Niagara Frontier, where the most conspicuous incident was the cutting out of the Caroline. For these services Col. Macnab received the honour of Knighthood and was accorded the thanks of the Provincial Parliaments.† On the Province of Canada being constituted, Sir Allan Macnab was again returned for his former constituency, and was elected Speaker. He became Prime Minister in 1854, and on retirement in 1856 was created a Baronet. In 1860 he became a Member of the Legislative Council. He m. 1stly, 6th May 1821, Elizabeth, dau. of Daniel Brooke, Lt. 41st and 49th Regts., afterwards of Toronto; she d. 1825; and 2ndly, 30th Sept. 1831, Mary, dau of John Stuart, Sheriff (above named); she d. 1846; and had issue, viz. :

3.—Mary-Stuart, m. Sept. 1861, to John, son of Hon. Sir Dominick Daly, Governor of South Australia.

*This is one of several instances mentioned in this book where mere boys took an active part in the defence of their country in 1812, and sometimes, as was the case with young Macnab, with distinction.

†The Duke of Wellington in the House of Lords stated that Sir Allan Macnab, by his staunch loyalty and prompt action, was the means of preserving the Canadas to the British Crown.

‡The Townships of Keppel and Albemarle were named in honor of this nobleman.

BRANT, U. E. L.

IN the year 1710 five Indian Chiefs or Sachems were taken to England, where they attracted much attention, and were presented to Queen Anne. Three of these were Mohawks, one of whom was chief of the Canajoharie clan or division of that tribe, to which the famous Brant belonged.

One of these chiefs, said to be the last mentioned, was the father of Nickus Brant or Aroghyadagha, also known by the name of Tehowaghwengaraghkwin, a sachem of the Wolf (Okwaho) family or totem. Two of the children of this chief attained considerable celebrity, viz.:

Joseph, of whom below.

Mary, or Molly, as she has usually been called (d. 1805), who became the second wife of Sir William Johnson, Baronet (d. 1774), who was a gentleman of large estates in the then Province of New York (which were confiscated by the American Government, and his son, Sir John Johnson, dispossessed, in the Revolutionary War). He exercised great influence among the Indians, and was a successful military leader, being consequently a prominent figure in the contest for supremacy between the English and French in North America. Molly is described by an authoress to whom she was well known, as possessing "an uncommonly agreeable person and good understanding." Of this marriage there was issue (besides probably others), William, d. unm., and daughters married as follows: to Capt. Farley, 60th Regt.; to Lieut. Lemoine, 24th Regt.; to John Ferguson of the Indian Department; to Capt. Earle, naval officer; and to Robert Kerr, M.D., of Niagara, said to be a relative of the Duke of Roxburgh, who had issue, three sons, all officers in the war of 1812, viz.:

1.—William-Johnson (Kerr) b. 1787, m. Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Brant, named below. He was Captain in the war of 1812; commanded the Indians at the Beaver Dams, when a small force under Fitzgibbon secured the surrender of a considerable body of Americans;* was subsequently Lieut.-Col.; organized a body of Indians to serve in 1837-8; and was sometime a member of the Legislative Assembly.

2.—Walter (Kerr), was wounded and taken prisoner in 1812, but escaped, and subsequently died of his wounds.

3.—Robert (Kerr).

And two daus., one m. to Colonel Clarke, of Niagara Falls, and the other to —— Gillespie, of Montreal.

(Capt). Joseph Brant or Thayendinegea, b. 1742, d. Nov. 1807, a Chief of the Six Nations and a Captain in the army; was distinguished as a brave and skilful warrior and as a statesman of great natural ability. At thirteen years of age he was present at the battle of Lake George, when the English, under Sir William Johnson, defeated the French. In 1764 he was engaged in a war against the great Chief Pontiac, who had raised a strong confederacy of Indian tribes to endeavour to dispossess the English of territories acquired by them from the French. Soon after this the American Revolutionary War broke out, in which Capt. Brant was a faithful and energetic adherent of the Crown, rendering, time and again, important services, and being also noted for his constant efforts to restrain his followers and to prevent the excesses which usually occurred in Indian warfare. It is true that this latter phase of his character has been denied by some writers, apparently on the authority of Campbell's "Gertrude of Wyoming," but it is now generally admitted, and Campbell himself declared, that the Brant pictured by him was a character of fiction to whom the name was unjustly applied. Some historians have indeed declared the story of the so-called "Massacre" of Wyoming to be almost wholly untrue, or at least grossly misstated; and at the most what did take place was a reprisal, according to the manner of warfare of the place and time, for atrocities committed upon the Royalists by the Revolutionary party. After the American States became independent, Capt. Brant, with the greater part of the Mohawks, and a number of the other five tribes, withdrew to Canada, where grants of land were made to the Six Nations on the Bay of Quinte, and subsequently on the Grand River, on both of which their descendants still continue. Capt. Brant himself was granted an estate of considerable extent at Burlington, where he built a house long known as Brant House, and lived with his family in the European manner, devoting the remainder of his life to furthering the welfare of his people, and their advance in civilization. A wooden church, erected about 1785 through his efforts, is still standing near Brantford, in which city* a handsome bronze statue has been erected to his memory. * Which bears his name, as does also the surrounding County of Brant. His Indian name is borne by the Township of Tyendinaga, on the Bay of Quinte.

* Lieut. Fitzgibbon's command consisted of 16 horse, and 46 foot, with the Indians, variously stated at from 250 to 450, the former figure being given by Kerr, and therefore likely to be correct The Americans, after having lost a number killed and wounded, surrendered 544, which included 80 cavalry, with two guns.

† Known by both surnames, and so styled in the register of this marriage. This genealogy contains several examples of surnames in the course of adoption. Since settling in Canada the Six Nations have generally acquired surnames, having previously seldom used any. The name Johnson is of frequent occurrence, and has perhaps been adopted out of respect for Sir William Johnson. The most common method of acquiring surnames by Indians at the present time is to take as such the name (Indian) of the first one who becomes prominent, or who adopts a settled mode of life.

‡ This name frequently occurs in the Registers of the Mohawk Church, and seems to be regarded as identical with Christina and Christiana.

LINE OF TEHKARIHOKEN, OR HEREDITARY CHIEF.

This line, so far as the Brant family is concerned, is traced from Catharine, third wife (and widow) of Capt. Joseph Brant, who herself inherited the right of nomination,* and this she exercised in favor of her son,

Capt. John Brant, Ahyonwaegs, who d 1832, when she nominated her grandson, William John, the position being held by Henry Brant, as locum tenens, until 1352; Chief John d. 1857.

The right of nomination was then held by Margaret Powles, who named her grandson, Joseph Lewis, who d. 1866.

On the death of the latter the eldest woman of the family was Catharine John, who named her sister's son,

William-John-Simcoe Kerr, who was Chief until 1875, when the nominator was Sarah Lottridge, who named

David Lewis, brother of the above named Joseph Lewis, and on his death, in 1877, she again exercised the right, and named his brother, Elias Lewis, the present Chief.

* By Indian custom, descent is traced from the mother, the children being of the family or totem of their mother and not of their father. On a hereditary chieftainship becoming vacant, the senior woman of the family of the last chief has the right of nomination of the successor, naming by preference her own son or grandson, or failing any such, then the son or grandson of her sister or other near relative.

* The nature of this service may be illustrated by an incident which occurred after the battle of Stoney Creek, when Capt. Merritt, while on scouting duty, found himself in the enemy's lines and was challenged by a sentry guarding "Old Gage's" house, to whom he replied by asking "Who placed you here?" and rode up to him; the sentry answered "My Captain, who has just gone into the house with a party of men"; Merritt then asked other questions, which not only gave him information as to the enemy, but also led the sentry to suppose him to be an officer of his own army, a ruse which his blue dragoon uniform made possible. He then, having disarmed the sentry, made him and another man prisoners, and carried them off, notwithstanding the party of the enemy in the house.

NOTE.—The heraldic insignia of the eight clans of the Six Nations, as anciently used by them, are displayed on sixteen banners now being made for the decoration of the Council House under the direction of the writer, after careful enquiry of the tribesmen, which may be described thus: For war, eight banners per pale sa. and gu.; and for peace, eight banners, or, a pale gu. (couleur de rose); charged respectively with the several totems of each clan, namely, Anowara, a turtle; Okwaho, a wolf; Ohkwari, a bear; Oskenonton, a deer; Tsianito, a beaver; Karhakonha, a hawk; Thekahon, a heron; Tawistawis, a snipe. As the attitudes of totems are not determined, but are in fact optional, those on the war banners are shown in attitudes denoting vigorous action, as rampant, volant, etc., and those on the peace banners as passant, close and the like. Each one of the Six Nations is regarded as consisting of the same eight clans, the members of which, although of different tribes, are accounted as blood relations and cannot intermarry; thus, for example, an Okwaho Mohawk may not marry an Okwaho Cayuga, but may marry a Mohawk of any other totem.

Shaw served as an officer in the Queen's Rangers for some time prior to the date of his first commission stated in the text, no doubt under a local commission. Many officers who served in the American Rev. War, and in 1812, held local commissions only, and no doubt also many were appointed as officers of the regular army by the officer having the local command, whose appointments were not confirmed until long after, and sometimes not at all, where the necessity of confirmation had ceased to exist, or where the corps to which such officers were attached, were reduced.

The Queen's Rangers, in which George Shaw held his commission, was not the famous Regt. of that name, but a corps raised after the reduction of that Regt.

Charlotte-Stuart Shaw was m. 27th June 1832, to Rev. Ephraim Evans, b. 30th June 1803, a Wesleyan minister, who settled in Upper Canada in 1824, son of James Evans, Capt. of ships employed in army transport service.
